Can every inhabitant of The Hague envisage themselves living in a safe, strong and environmentally friendly city? Under the current city government this is unlikely. There can and there should be a change. Vote D66, to make this change.

Living in a safe neighbourhood, with clean air and plenty of nature; this is exactly what D66 wants for all residents of The Hague. To this end strong and durable buildings are essential. The coastline should remain undisturbed. Widespread public transport networks and safe bike-paths should be created for the entire city.

Entrepreneurs and international organisations create job opportunities for The Hague. Cultural establishments and tourists also create extra income. Culture is a vital aspect of city-life; D66 promotes widespread cultural growth for The Hague and all its inhabitants. With well-run child day-care centres employment becomes both more attractive and realistic. Moreover, shopping on Sundays will be maintained.

Education is a vital component of D66. A sound education gives youths a future. The city needs skill and talent. Thus more finance should be devoted to education. This will help alleviate language-learning delays and make the school the focal point of local communities within the city. A porter at every school will ensure that each school is safe and well-looked after.

A bright future for The Hague necessitates a conscious, 'green' approach. This means we should act now, not tomorrow. When it comes to clean air, energy costs and a better climate The Hague needs to shift into a higher gear.

Changes within the city are not realised behind desks. D66 advocates transparent information sharing and encourages participation and citizenship. Essentially people will not be discussed, but rather will be the ones discussing.
